

'EFFECTIVE TEACHING AND LEARNING'

PROGRAMS TO BE CONSOLIDATED*

Striving Readers: $250 million
Even Start family literacy: $66.5 million
Literacy Through School Libraries:
$19.1 million
National Writing Project: $25.6 million
Reading Is Fundamental: $24.8 million
Ready-to-Learn Television: $27.3 million

Effective Teaching and Learning: Literacy
$450 MILLION

PROGRAM TO BE REPLACED*

Mathematics and Science Partnerships:
$180.5 million

Effective Teaching and Learning: Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics
$300 MILLION

PROGRAMS TO BE CONSOLIDATED*

Excellence in Economic Education:
$1.4 million
Teaching American History: $119.0 million
Arts in Education: $40.0 million
Foreign Language Assistance:
$26.9 million
Academics for American History and Civics: $1.8 million
Close Up Fellowships: $1.9 million
Civic Education
—We the People: $21.6 million
—Cooperative Education Exchange:
$13.4 million

Effective Teaching and Learning for a Well-Rounded Education
$265 MILLION

Educational Technology State Grants:

$100 million
The technology grants would be incorporated into the budget authority across the three Effective Teaching and Learning programs.

As part of his fiscal 2011 budget request, President Barack Obama is proposing to consolidate a variety of existing programs into three larger funds focused on literacy, STEM education, and a “well-rounded education.”

*Figures are from the fiscal 2010 budget.