

Enrollment Breakdowns for School Closures

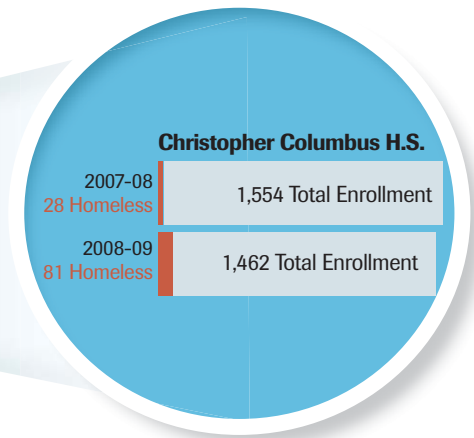

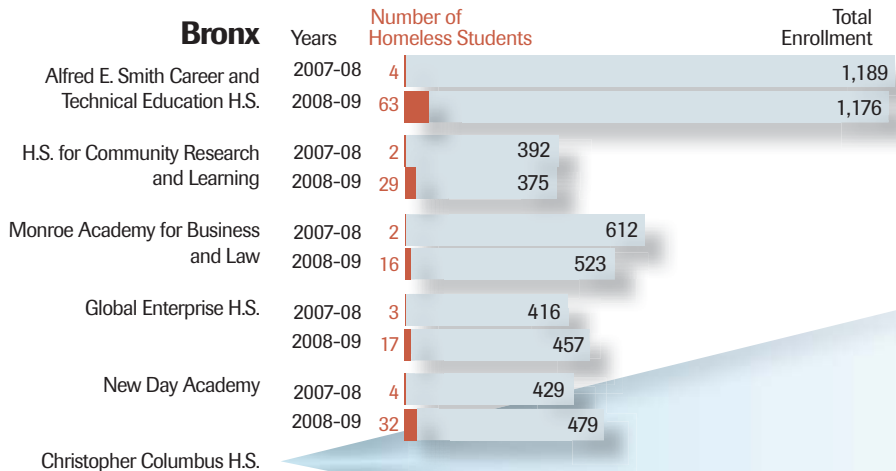

The Institute for Children, Poverty and Homelessness, in New York City, tracked homeless students and support for them in city schools slated for closure in the 2007-08 school year. At the time, researchers found higher concentrations of homeless students in many of these schools than the average for their New York boroughs.

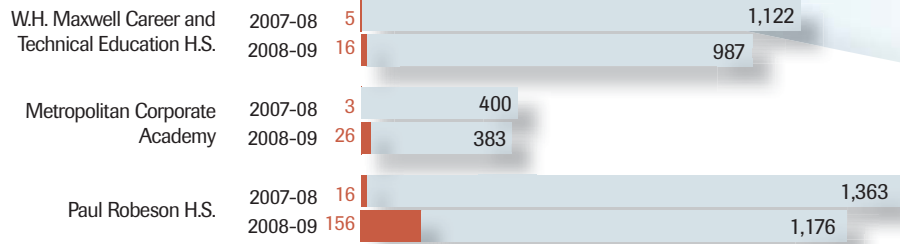

NOTE: "High school" is abbreviated as H.S.

SOURCE: New York City Public Schools

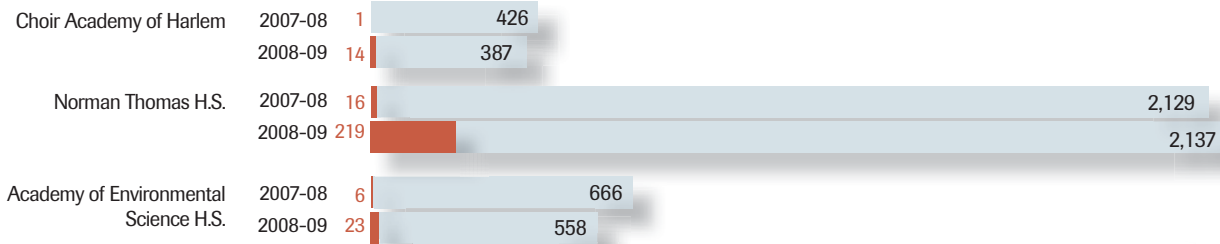

Bronx

Brooklyn

Manhattan

Queens

