

Though many people contributed in many ways to Lessons of a Century, the writers and editors at Education Week would especially like to thank the following people and institutions for their assistance:

David Ment and Bette Weneck in the Special Collections department of the Milbank Library at Teachers College, Columbia University. The library houses uncounted textbooks, journal articles, curriculum guides, and photos that have been collected from school districts across the country and meticulously catalogued and preserved since the 19th century.

Historians David L. Angus, Daniel J. Boorstin, Carl F. Kaestle, Marvin Lazerson, Jeffrey E. Mirel, Diane Ravitch, and David B. Tyack.

Olga Montgomery of the Finney County Historical Museum in Kansas; former high school teacher Bernadine Sitts of Garden City, Kan.; former Garden City school board member and local historian Pat Fishback; Donald Stull, a professor at the University of Kansas; Mark Grey, a professor at the University of Northern Iowa; Ben Barrett, the director of legislative research for the state of Kansas; Garden City School District 457; and the faculty of Garfield School.

Sharon A. Britton, the director of communications for Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass.; Bruce Cooper, a professor of education at Fordham University; Ruth Quattlebaum, the archivist at the Phillips Academy; Scott Somerville, an attorney for the Home School Legal Defense Association; Patricia M. Lines, a senior fellow at the Discovery Institute in Seattle; Patrick Farenga, the president of Holt Associates; Charles L. Glenn Jr., the author of The Myth of the Common School; and Charles J. O'Malley, the former executive director of the National Council for Private School Accreditation.

Raquel Irrizarry of Corbis and Mike LeTourneau of AP/Wide World for their invaluable assistance in locating photographs. Artist Brett Helquist for the illustrations that appear in the Perspective section of each chapter.

Steve McShane of the Calument Regional Archives at Indiana University Northwest in Gary.

Copy editor Diane Barry, proofreader Ihsan K. Taylor, and researcher Sharita Jacobs.

In addition, we would like to thank the numerous people featured in the pages that follow for sharing their memories and thoughts with the writers at Education Week.
